How Great Nicobar Can Turn Into India's Hormuz-Like Strategic Bet

New Delhi: Great Nicobar Island, the southernmost point of India, which is closer to the coasts of Thailand, Malaysia and Indonesia than to mainland India, is set to witness one of New Delhi's biggest and most strategic developments in decades. Spread across 166 square kilometres, the project includes construction of a transshipment port, a civilian-military airport, a power plant, tourism infrastructure and a township for 350,000 people on the island. It is slated for completion over three decades, with its first phase due by 2028.

Currently, India's ports lack deep-water berths for large ships. Because of this, cargoes are routed through Colombo and Singapore, resulting in substantial revenue losses for India. When completed, the hub's 14.2 million TEU (Twenty-Foot Equivalent Unit) International Container Terminal will not only reduce India's reliance on other transshipment hubs but also strengthen the country's ability to monitor a critical maritime corridor in the Indian Ocean, giving

New Delhi a stronger strategic foothold near the Strait of Malacca. The Strait of Malacca is the main maritime chokepoint connecting the Indian Ocean to the Pacific through the South China Sea. It is one of the world's most vital shipping lanes, accommodating around 25 per cent of global maritime trade and nearly 30 per cent of all global petroleum flows.

India's Strategic Bet

The Indian government, in recent months, has increasingly acknowledged the strategic value of the Great Nicobar Island. In a May release, the government said the Great Nicobar project "is a strategic project which aims to strengthen India's presence in the Andaman Sea and Southeast Asia."

The government described the project as a maritime and economic hub close to the East-West shipping route and a key to the country's defence and national security objectives.

"The project is designed to enhance India's national security, strategic and defence presence,"

Hon'ble Lt. Governor launches Tourism Calendar of 2026-27 at Lok Niwas

Sri Vijaya Puram, June 5

Admiral D K Joshi, PVSM, AVSM, YSM, NM, VSM, (Retd.), Hon'ble Lt. Governor, A&N Islands and Vice-Chairman, Islands Development Agency launched the Tourism Calendar for A&N Islands today at Lok Niwas, unveiling the Islands' calendar of events from June 2026 to April 2027, showcasing Islands vibrant culture and rich heritage.

The Calendar covers monthly events for the upcoming tourist season to help tourists and the industry partners to plan their itinerary in advance and opportunities to experience the lesser-known monsoon season of the Islands. Chief Secretary alongwith Senior Officers of A&N Administration, A&N Police and A&N Forests were present, a press release from Lok Niwas said.

Applications invited from Tourism Stakeholders for Operation of Transparent Kayaks at Swaraj Dweep

Sri Vijaya Puram, June 5 The Directorate of Information, Publicity & Tourism, A&N Administration, proposes to permit operation of transparent kayaking activities at the Neem-o-Reef-Jetty stretch, Swaraj Dweep, in accordance with the recommendations of the Risk Assessment Report carried out under the provisions of the

A&N Islands Watersports Guidelines, 2015. The proposed operational area extends between the Jetty-Neem-o-Reef, Swaraj Dweep (Coordinates: - (a) Latitudinal positions are 12°2'436" North to 11°58.669" North (b) Longitudinal positions are 095°59'030" East to 093°1.140" East), which has been identified as a suitable location for kayaking activities. The initiative aims to decongest the existing Jetty-Lighthouse kayaking stretch and provide additional opportunities for tourism stakeholders while ensuring effective monitoring and regulation. The Neem-o-Reef stretch is known for its rich marine biodiversity, underwater flora and fauna. In order to enhance the visitor experience and promote eco-friendly tourism, permission in the proposed area shall be restricted to transparent kayaks only, enabling tourists to view and appreciate the marine ecosystem while kayaking.

custom-fabricated 3D-printed artificial reef has been successfully deployed near the plant. Professional divers will continuously monitor the structure over the next year to study biological development and its positive impact on coral growth.

Prof. Ramakrishnan further announced that NIOT is investing Rs.15 crore to construct a state-of-the-art fish broodstock infrastructure at its Sri Vijaya Puram campus. This facility will raise fish, harvest eggs, and hatch young fry until they are resilient enough for transfer into deep-ocean open fish cages, significantly boosting the local fishing industry. These initiatives leverage NIOT's 20-year legacy of monitoring ocean currents and water quality via high-frequency (HF) radar systems in the Andaman Islands.

The projects are being executed in close coordination with the Andaman Administration's Fisheries, Forest, and Science and Technology departments. Furthermore, a specialized committee is being formed to integrate the expert input of the Central Marine Fisheries Research Institute (CMFRI).

Smt. Pallavi Sarkar, IAS, Secretary (Fisheries) and other senior officers from various Departments and institutions attended the function, a press release from PIB, Sri Vijaya Puram said.

How Great Nicobar Can Turn.....

strengthen the islands' economic position, and accelerate holistic development in the region," it added.

Defence and diplomacy analysts also believe the maritime development on the island has a strategic value because it is situated right at the mouth of the Malacca.

"It is a great place to monitor all the traffic coming in and out of the strait," Shekhar Sinha, a former vice chief of the Indian Navy, told Al Jazeera.

"It would give India an edge in maritime domain awareness," he added, referring to New Delhi's ability to track and monitor activity at sea.

Sanjay Iyer, a former brigadier in the Indian army and a military diplomat, also said the Great Nicobar project is probably one of the more consequential strategic bets India has made in recent decades.

"It gives India a persistent presence in the eastern Indian Ocean rather than the occasional visit, better awareness of what's moving through the region, and a degree of leverage that didn't exist before," he said while talking to South China Morning Post.

Iyer noted that New Delhi isn't going to blockade the Malacca Strait in peacetime. "Nobody seriously expects that. But the infrastructure on Great Nicobar improves India's ability to monitor [China's] PLA Navy movements between the western Pacific and the Indian Ocean," he added.

India's Maritime Benefits

Apart from giving a strategic edge over China, the Great Nicobar project will also reduce India's reliance on the deep-sea ports of neighbouring nations. At the project's core is the construction of the International Container Transshipment Port at Galathea Bay. For India, which has long trans-shipped a sizeable share of its containers through foreign ports, a deep-water port able to receive the largest container vessels changes the unit economics of trade.

Around 95 per cent of India's international trade by volume is transited via sea. It is supported by a vast network of 12 major ports and 200 minor and intermediate ports across the country's 7,516km (4,670 miles) coastline.

According to analysts, India has been under-utilising its potential in the Indian Ocean, which is a vital artery for commerce and energy supplies connecting Europe, Asia and Africa. But now, "India wants to reduce its logistical dependence on foreign transshipment hubs such as Colombo, Singapore, and Port Klang," Uday Chandra, a professor at Ashoka University, told the South China Morning Post.

"It is India's attempt to convert its inherited colonial geography into maritime leverage in the 21st century. A significant proportion of cargo business on the east-west corridor can be captured by India directly without depending wholly on foreign maritime hubs," he added.

Chandra noted that the Great Nicobar pushes India to think like a maritime or an island power. "The Andaman and Nicobar chain is where contemporary India blends into Southeast Asia," Chandra said, adding that the project could mark "the rise of archipelagic India", enabling it to form "strategic hinges" between the Indian Ocean and the Pacific Ocean for surveillance, logistics, and deterrence. programmes in the Tehsil was undertaken. The progress achieved by different departments was reviewed, and the need for close coordination among line departments and PRI representatives was emphasized to ensure the timely execution of developmental works and efficient delivery of public services.

Various issues relating to infrastructure development, public welfare, civic amenities, and other matters of local importance were discussed in detail. The Deputy Commissioner stressed the importance of prompt redressal of public grievances and directed the concerned departments to take necessary action for resolving issues raised during the meeting.

The PRI members apprised the Chair of various local issues and developmental requirements in their respective areas. The Deputy Commissioner assured that all genuine concerns would be examined on priority and the concerned departmental officers were instructed to take appropriate action in accordance with the prevailing rules and guidelines.

Emphasizing the importance of a strong partnership between elected PRI representatives and Government departments, the Deputy Commissioner, N&MA encouraged regular interaction, transparency in functioning, and proactive communication to build public confidence and improve the effectiveness of developmental initiatives at the grassroots level. He also emphasized the importance of regular field visits by departmental officers, effective monitoring of ongoing projects, and proactive engagement with the public to ensure that the benefits of Government programmes reach every eligible beneficiary.

The meeting concluded with a collective commitment from all stakeholders to work in close coordination and mutual trust for the overall development and welfare of the people of Diglipur Tehsil, a press release from AC, Diglipur said.
