

'Great Nicobar Can Rewire India's Maritime Future'

Admiral (Retd.) D.K. Joshi, Hon'ble Lt. Governor says Great Nicobar is part of a wider push to turn Andaman and Nicobar into India's Indo-Pacific gateway

The Great Nicobar project has emerged as a strategic initiative, receiving appreciation for its potential to drive transformative development, enhance connectivity, and strengthen the region's strategic importance. According to Admiral D K Joshi, PVSM, AVSM, YSM, NM, VSM (Retd.), Hon'ble Lt. Governor, A&N Islands & Vice Chairman, Islands Development Agency, the project must be viewed as part of a much larger effort to transform the island chain into one of India's most important strategic and economic assets. In an interview to The Gist, the former Navy Chief stated that the Andaman and Nicobar Islands are undergoing a historic infrastructure build-up after decades of neglect after Independence. The objective, he said, is to leverage the islands' unique geography to strengthen India's comprehensive national power and enhance its position in the Indo-Pacific. At the centre of this transformation is a network of dual-use infrastructure projects spanning aviation, maritime connectivity, digital communications and tourism. Hon'ble Lt. Governor highlighted plans that will eventually provide four full-length runways across the island chain, roughly 250 kilometres apart, allowing day-and-night operations and significantly improving connectivity across the 750-kilometre north-south stretch of the archipelago. He also pointed to expanded helicopter services and upgraded aviation infrastructure aimed at supporting both civilian and strategic requirements. The maritime sector, however, remains the cornerstone of the vision. Hon'ble Lt. Governor described the proposed International Container Transshipment Port at Great Nicobar as a project with the potential to become one of the most significant container hubs in the Indo-Pacific. Planned to be developed largely through private investment under a public-private partnership model, the port is expected to handle nearly six million TEUs in its initial phase and up to 21 million TEUs when fully developed. Hon'ble Lt. Governor outlined a multi-layered approval process involving local, regional and national bodies, including scientific institutions, independent experts and regulatory agencies. He noted that the project underwent scrutiny before the National Green Tribunal for nearly two years before receiving clearance, and that more than Rs. 2,250 crore has been earmarked over 30 years for environmental mitigation and conservation measures.

He was equally categorical on concerns regarding indigenous communities, stating that "not one tribal" resident would be displaced by the project. Beyond Great Nicobar, Hon'ble Lt. Governor pointed to dramatic improvements in digital connectivity. Since the commissioning of the submarine optical fibre network linking Chennai to the islands, bandwidth capacity has increased nearly 200-fold, fundamentally changing communications across the archipelago. Tourism infrastructure is also expanding rapidly, with multiple high-end hospitality projects awarded under PPP arrangements and plans to position the islands as a global scuba-diving destination. Perhaps most significantly, Hon'ble Lt. Governor argued that the islands sit astride critical maritime routes connecting the Indian and Pacific Oceans. He highlighted emerging transport corridors around Thailand's proposed land bridge and the strategic relevance of the 10-degree channel, suggesting that future trade flows could increasingly pass through waters dominated by the Andaman and Nicobar chain. In that context, he described the islands not as a springboard but as a gateway linking the Indo-Pacific. For Hon'ble Lt. Governor, the Great Nicobar project is therefore not merely about a port, an airport or tourism. It is about transforming geography into strategic advantage and positioning the Andaman and Nicobar Islands as a central node in India's Indo-Pacific future. Deptt. of AH & VS distributes Sonali breed country hens to PVTGs of Strait Island

Sri Vijaya Puram, June 15 In a continued effort to support livelihood generation and nutritional security among the Particularly Vulnerable Tribal Groups (PVTGs) of the Andaman & Nicobar Islands, the Department of Animal Husbandry & Veterinary Services (AH&VS), handed over 120 Sonali Country Hens under the Tribal Subsidy Scheme for distribution to PVTG beneficiaries residing at Strait Island. The poultry birds were handed over to the Tribal Welfare Officer, Andaman Adim Janjati Vikas Samiti (AAJVS) at the Government Poultry Farm, Dollygunj, in the presence of officials from the Department of Animal Husbandry & Veterinary Services and AAJVS. The initiative aims to promote backyard poultry farming among the tribal communities, thereby enhancing self-employment opportunities, improving household income, and ensuring the availability of nutritious eggs and meat for tribal families. The Sonali breed has been selected due to its adaptability to local climatic conditions, better disease resistance, and superior egg and meat production performance under backyard rearing systems. The beneficiaries are expected to derive long-term economic and nutritional benefits through the rearing of these birds.

The Department of Animal Husbandry & Veterinary Services has been actively implementing various poultry and livestock development programmes across the Islands with special emphasis on tribal welfare and livelihood enhancement. The Tribal Subsidy Scheme (Contd. on last page)

He appreciated all voluntary blood donors for their selfless contribution towards saving lives. Dr. Subrata Saha, Project Director, A & N AIDS Control Society expressed heartfelt gratitude to all dignitaries and voluntary blood donors for their invaluable support.

As part of the World Blood Donor Day observance, another blood donation camp was organized on June 13 at INHS Dhanvantari, where 85 units of blood were collected from voluntary donors, demonstrating the strong commitment of the community and defence personnel towards this life-saving cause. The camp was organized under the guidance of Dr. Anish Sharma, Lt. Col., Head of the Department of Pathology, INHS Dhanvantari. The blood donation activities were facilitated by Dr. Divya, Junior Resident, Blood Bank. Donor certificates were also distributed to all voluntary blood donors in recognition of their valuable contribution, a press release from ANACS said.

OBITUARY

We are deeply saddened to announce the sad demise of Sabira Anwar, the cherished wife of Shri Anwar Moosa, who passed away on June 14, 2026, in Chennai. A valued and beloved figure in our community, Sabira Anwar was widely admired for her gentle nature, immense kindness, and resilient spirit. The impact she made on our lives and the meaningful connections she established will be long remembered. The members of NEWA and the Nicobarese Community convey our profound sorrow and heartfelt grief regarding this immense loss. During this period of mourning, we stand in solidarity with the grieving family, extending our full support and affection. Her legacy as a foundational pillar of our community remains unshakable, and her memory will always be held dear.

May she find eternal peace.
Our deepest sympathies go out to the family and relatives during this time of sorrow.
With sincere condolences,
The President of NEWA and members of the Nicobarese Community.
