Climate Change is causing natural disasters: Hon'ble Lt. Governor, Dr. Dinesh Sharma

Climate change is assuming a destructive form

Andaman is extremely vulnerable to climate change

Development works in A&N Islands will go hand in hand with conservation of nature

Balance of nature is extremely important for human life

Need to strengthen the spirit of nature conservation

Aligarh / Sri Vijaya Puram, Nov. 14

Hon'ble Lieutenant Governor of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, former Rajya Sabha Member of Parliament and former Deputy Chief Minister of Uttar Pradesh, Dr. Dinesh Sharma, stated that climate change is bringing about various kinds of natural disasters. The imbalance in nature lies at the root of disasters such as cyclones, earthquakes and floods. The weather cycle is changing and assuming a destructive form. Due to the melting of glaciers, sea levels are rising and coastal areas are getting submerged.

Addressing a dialogue programme on climate change organised in Aligarh, the Hon'ble Lieutenant Governor described the Andaman and Nicobar Islands as highly vulnerable to climate change and said that several challenges have been emerging there due to this phenomenon. Rising sea levels have increased the threat of coastal erosion. Due to the rise in water temperature, mangrove reefs, which act as a protective barrier for the islands against tsunamis and storms and are the backbone of the marine ecosystem, are being destroyed. Cyclones are becoming more powerful and causing greater damage. Rising sea levels are also reducing the availability of fresh water.

Describing Andaman as the Guardian of the Nation's Borders, the Hon'ble Lieutenant Governor said that comprehensive development works would be undertaken in A&N Islands at a faster pace in the coming times. Connectivity through waterways and airways would be improved, along with the development of port areas. While undertaking this development, it would also be ensured that no harm is caused to the environment. Andaman, with more than 80 percent forest cover, also possesses unparalleled natural beauty. He further stated that the adverse effects of climate change are also being witnessed in mainland areas. Rising temperatures and drought are examples of these effects.

Dr. Sharma said that maintaining environmental balance is extremely important for human life. India is a country where the Earth, Water and the Sun are worshipped. All festivals and beliefs are closely associated with nature. Life becomes easier through harmony among water, forests, animals and climate. At present, several natural imbalances have emerged, due to which people's lives have undergone changes. Various kinds of diseases are spreading due to pollution.

He said that along with cutting trees, it is equally important to plant more trees. In Gujarat, there is a tradition of planting trees in the names of one's ancestors during the Pitru Paksha period. People also take responsibility for protecting these trees. India is described through the trinity of Gau (Cow), Ganga and Dharti Mata (Mother Earth). Nature has always held great significance in the country's culture. Even snakes are worshipped as deities in India. The spirit of nature conservation must not be allowed to weaken. Our traditions must be kept alive.

He further stated that mobile phones have transformed human life. However, their use has also brought certain social distortions. They have become a reason for creating distances among family members and reducing communication. Even basic social etiquette is changing. Families are becoming smaller, and respect for the elderly is declining. Along with environmental balance, there must also be a balance in family relationships and values.

He appealed to people not to disturb the balance of nature and to take a pledge to plant trees in the names of their ancestors.

Memorial Public School, Aligarh.
