To View the Great Nicobar Project Strategically, Reverse the Gaze

India needs to become an ambitious upstander, not a passive bystander, and engage proactively with an emerging geography of conflict and opportunity

To understand the ongoing political controversy around the Great Nicobar Project, referred to as India's "natural aircraft carrier" and "unsinkable carrier", we need to reverse the gaze: from land to waters, and from development to security. The Great Nicobar Island is not merely a 1,045 sq. km. land mass. It is part of an island chain, the southernmost tip of India, that expands India's economic geography by 0.6 million sq. km. through the Exclusive Economic Zone. To put this in perspective, the EEZ of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands is close to the combined size of Rajasthan and Madhya Pradesh; it is larger than the landmass of Ukraine, France, or Spain.

From a Bystander...

Just 40 nautical miles or 74 km from the Malacca Strait - roughly the distance between Kohima and Dimapur, engaged in mass cutting and levelling of earth, thereby altering the nature and character of the land and causing permanent damage to agricultural holdings, with the primary motive of plotting and sale of such agricultural land, which is totally illegal. or Amsterdam and Rotterdam - the Great Nicobar Island has been a bystander, silently watching 30 percent of global trade pass through a waterway that is just 2.5 km at its narrowest. About 29 percent of total maritime oil flows through this Strait, of which crude comprises 70 percent and petroleum products the remainder. The Malacca Strait is the shortest sea route between oil and gas producers in West Asia and fast-growing consumers in East and Southeast Asia, including China, which accounts for 48 percent of import volumes through the Strait. Malacca is becoming increasingly crucial to India too. At a time when energy chokepoints are being weaponised - as seen with the US and Iran at northern end sits the Andaman and Nicobar Command (ANC); its expansion into Great Nicobar would extend cover across the entire 780 km. island chain - approximately the distance between New Delhi and Varanasi.

Development through ports, airports, and other infrastructure will not merely facilitate trade; the potential to become a major tourist and living destination, like Singapore, is incidental. The primary driver will be defence, which will build military infrastructure and establish a strategic presence. The US Indo-Pacific Command, headquartered in Honolulu, which has navigated environmental sensitivities in its area of operations, could offer a useful model. The Great Nicobar Island will primarily be a maritime and strategic hub, around which

District Administration (SA) initiates action against illegal land development & plotting activities

Sri Vijaya Puram, May 19

Recently four cases from Beodnabad and Bimblitan (Kodiyaghat) areas have come to the notice of the District Administration, wherein certain persons/recorded tenants/their representatives, in the name of development of agricultural land, are engaged in mass cutting and levelling of earth, thereby altering the nature and character of the land and causing permanent damage to agricultural holdings, with the primary motive of plotting and sale of such agricultural land, which is totally illegal. ## Solarisation of remote Police Outposts in Nicobar District under CSR initiative

In a significant step towards sustainable development and strengthening police infrastructure in remote areas, the Andaman & Nicobar Police has successfully installed 5 KW hybrid solar power systems at four remote Police Out Posts (OPs) in Nicobar District - Sawai, Chowra, Makachua and Afra Bay.

Prior to the installation, these outposts faced severe challenges due to limited electricity availability and to address this issue, the Andaman & Nicobar Police, under the guidance of the Director General of Police, A&N Islands, entered into a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with Price Waterhouse Coopers (PwC) India Foundation on 13th February, 2026, for the installation of hybrid solar power systems at the four identified outposts, under the Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) initiative.

The solar power systems were formally inaugurated by Shri. Hargobinder Singh Dhaliwal, IPS, Director General of Police, A&N Islands, on 18th May, trade, tourism, and education could flourish.

Land Acquisition and Tribal Protections

The interests of the tribal communities living on the island - the 237 Shompens, who are hunter-gatherers, and the 1,094 fishing-dependent Nicobarese - are a central consideration in the project's design. The government has stated that no community will be adversely affected and that no displacement of tribal people will be permitted. The land-use framework described below is intended to give effect to those commitments.

Of the total landmass of the Great Nicobar Island, 751.07 sq. km. is officially marked as tribal reserve. The Great Nicobar Project will occupy 166.10 sq. km. of the total land. Of this, 84.10 sq. km., or about half, overlaps with the tribal reserve. Within that overlap, 11.03 sq. km., or 13.1 percent, has been used as revenue land since 1972. The remaining 73.07 sq. km. is being de-notified for the project. Against this, 76.98 sq. km. is being re-notified as tribal reserve, a net addition of 3.91 sq. km.

The Geography of Risk

Being in Seismic Zone V, the highest in India, the island chain is vulnerable to earthquakes. But so are parts of Jammu and Kashmir, Himachal Pradesh, Uttarakhand, the Rann of Kutch in Gujarat, and parts of north Bihar, none of which have seen development stalled on seismic grounds. And so are thirteen other nations that rank higher than India in earthquake frequency, including Indonesia, Mexico, Japan, China, Argentina, and Greece, all of which continue to build, grow, and host hundreds of millions of people.

The Great Nicobar project could serve as the southern anchor of a larger vision stretching from Landfall Island in the north, with several islands in between functioning as economic nodes under a defence umbrella. Most importantly, all should be connected through ferry services that serve as logistical and transportation arteries between the islands, while drawing tourist traffic from across the world. The project needs to think boldly on airports too - not one, not two, but five: two large ones at either end of the chain and three smaller ones in the middle. Apart from connectivity, such an arrangement will enable communities to access better healthcare, supplies, and intra-island engagements.

Compulsions of Geopolitics

A new geopolitics is playing out, a new world order is in the making, a new strategic direction is being reimagined, and a stronger defence presence is building up in the region. From technology and finance to energy and chokepoints, everything is being used as a tool of power. The proposed port, dual-use airport, township, and power plant at Great Nicobar Island could be one of India's several answers to navigating a geopolitical environment that is, by any honest assessment, the most volatile since the end of the Cold War. The Great Nicobar Project must move forward at warp speed.
